Could you specify skills that your organisation requires now and Higher Education is currently not providing?

Communication skills, presentation and media training, technical skills relating to alcoholic beverages.

It's a common fact that foreign language graduates can't use the language fluently. I guess this is due to not enough language practice with native speakers.

Business acumen within the language industry

Soft skills are a big issue but This is not just the role of academics.

Software engineering for front end and online user experience (UX)
We also see a lack of Data Science and Statistical / Analytical students.

Critical thinking and creativity are skills required in the workplace as not every similar issue has the same resolution and there is a need to find alternative solutions.

Flexibility

More practical and office based skills would be a plus.

business awareness/demonstrating commercial awareness skills,

Practical training with real orders

ability to relate to people in the field of work, technical expertise

Motivation, responsibility, self-discipline

Communication skills, communication psychology.

Excellent knowledge of the language and its literature

We have a demand for Graduates who are interested in working within Technology - this is something that Higher Education is providing just not in large enough numbers!

practical skills

business organization and management of language projects

Very good knowledge of English, Russian and Ukrainian
